

DETAILS

When it comes to home design, the little things make all the difference

Throughout this Wisconsin cabin by David Heide Design Studio, the use of stone exudes rustic sophistication.

PHOTO RICH MICHELL

FIRST: RICH MICHELL; SECOND, THIRD: SPACECRAFTING/NICOLE CULLINAN

INTERIOR USE OF STONE

1 David Heide Design Studio

This classic Wisconsin cabin boasts curated material selections that feel both timeless and refined. For instance, Chilton limestone, chosen for its neutral, red, and gold tones, flows from outside through the foyer, great room, and lower-level family spaces. Wood lintels above niches and doors mimic the look of thick masonry walls, while intricate stone details contribute to the cabin's sophistication. One judge says, "The use of stone contributes to the rustic feel and becomes a cohesive theme in itself."

2 Tays & Co. Design Studios

3 Tays & Co. Design Studios